In the regular announcement column today will be found the formal announcement of Chief of Police Harry A. Ort as a candidate for re-election to the office he now holds.

Chief Ort has had much experience both as an officer and an executive and is recognized throughout Kentucky and the South as one of the best informed police executives and a man of great natural detective ability. The records in Chief Ort's office are among the most complete criminal records in the state of Kentucky and quite often he is called upon to use those records for the benefit of much larger departments.

Chief Ort announces that he will make this race solely upon his record during the last term for service and efficiency and points with pride to that record as his chief argument for a re-election.

SALVATION ARMY EFFORT TO BE MADE SATURDAY AND SUNDAY

Mass Meeting in Market Street Friday Evening To Start Special Effort Here For Funds For Salvation Army Work.

At a meeting of the Maysville County Board of Education held Sunday afternoon at the Third Street M. E. church, it was decided to make an effort for finances to assist the Salvation Army on Saturday and Sunday next.

The effort will be started by a mass meeting in Market street at the Boys' Band stand, on Friday evening when there will be a concert by the band and Jeff Davis, known the world over as the King of the Hoboes, will make an address explaining the work and the needs of the Salvation Army. Mr. Davis is a world-famed orator and there should be a great audience to hear him.

While the Advisory Board does not think it wise to make a house-to-house canvass at this time, they feel certain there are many in Maysville and Mays County who desire to contribute to this most worthy cause and they will give them that opportunity Saturday and Sunday. Committeemen named Sunday will call on those who they have reason to believe can and will contribute to the cause but no effort to make a "drive" will be made.

Committeemen chosen Sunday follow:

MASON COUNTY GIRL DISAPPEARED MYSTERIOUSLY FROM ROOM

Miss Teresa Hall, of Sardis, Disappears at Washington and Is Found in Indiana Town By Father.

A Washington dispatch says: Miss Teresa Hall, Sardis, Mason county, Kentucky, a student in George Washington University here and clerk in the Internal Revenue Bureau, who was reported to the police Saturday as having been missing from her room in the Salvation Army Hotel since last Friday, has been located at Sheridan, Ind. A telegram received Sunday by her father, Mr. H. Hall, now at Greenville, Ohio, gave no reason for the mysterious way in which Miss Hall departed from Washington without advising her father of her intention.

The message simply stated: "Have located Teresa at Sheridan, Ind."

Police conducted a thorough search of Washington Sunday, but when all efforts to locate Miss Hall proved futile it was feared that she might have drowned in the Potomac River, and at the time that her father received the information, that she had been located, the Harbor police were searching the river.

"My sister was studious and never creased for the constant association of men admirers," said Miss Mary Hall.

"She had a career before her. It had been her intention to finish her course in history and rhetoric at the University, and then to teach on an Indian Reservation. She had been despondent recently, however, and should have been under the care of a physician for nervous trouble. But I am at a loss to account for her action in leaving Washington without advising me, and of going to Sheridan, Ind. I do not know anything further than the information given in the telegram today from my father."

Friends of Miss Hall here, however, believe that she must have eloped.

EDWIN PEARCE IS BOUND AND GAGGED; HOME IS ROBBED

Mr. Edwin E. Pearce's California Home Robbed and He Is Bound and Gagged.

The Lexington Leader Sunday contained this item about Mr. Edwin E. Pearce, formerly of Flemingsburg, and well-known here:

Edwin E. Pearce, of Lexington and Los Angeles, was bound and gagged by four masked men who had just robbed the Pearce residence of several thousand dollars worth of silver and jewelry, according to a letter received Saturday by Mrs. J. C. Carrick, sister of Mr. Pearce.

This robbery occurred about 1 o'clock in the afternoon while Mr. Pearce was away from the house, his Chinese servant having been bound and gagged and the jewelry secured before Mr. Pearce's arrival.

The burglars were still in the house, however, when Mr. Pearce entered and after forcing him at the point of pistols to throw up his hands as he entered the house they tied his hands and feet, gagged him and departed with their loot.

The Chinese servant finally succeeded in freeing himself and Mr. Pearce. The police were notified but no arrests had been made in connection with the case when the letter to Mrs. Carrick was written. The exact value of the stolen property was unknown, Mrs. Carrick said.

Mr. Pearce has been making his home in Los Angeles for several years paying periodical visits to relatives here.

Suit was brought this afternoon in Circuit Court by Elizabeth Warder, Eliza J. Corryell and Nannie Hopper against the executor of Amanda Wallingford, et al., in an effort to have the probated will of Amanda Wallingford, deceased set aside. The plaintiffs charge that the maker of the will was of unsound mind and unable to make a just will at the date.

Dr. Reynolds accompanied the young man to his home where he found two brothers, a sister and his father, Mr. Frank Russell, all broken out with the disease. The house was immediately quarantined and all who had come in contact with the family were vaccinated.

Where the young man took the disease is not known. The only place he had been away from home was on the steamer Homer Smith several days ago.

Dr. Reynolds today advised all who had been exposed to the disease to be vaccinated at once. While the young victims are not said to be very ill, the senior Mr. Russell is said to be quite ill.

And likewise to earnestly and consistently oppose all things that are not for the good of the county as a whole.

PERSEVERANCE WINS.

Irvin S. Cobb, who says that he believes a good part of the criticism of his work as a humorist and a short story writer is justifiable, asserts, however, that he knows he is a good reporter. The reason he gives for this somewhat bold declaration is that the way one learns to do things right is to do them wrong and thereby learn better, and he avers emphatically that he "reckons" he has reported more stories wrong than any newspaper man in the country.

Along the same lines Bishop Woodcock, of Louisville, in a recent sermon on the "Success of Failure," extracts from which were published broadly in the newspapers of the state, declared that failures are necessary steps on the ladder of achievement, pointing out, however, that they only serve their purpose when the man who fails is humiliated by his difficulties and is inspired to "do better next time."

Probably no more striking illustration has appeared recently of the "success of failure" than a simple story of the troubles of a housewife on a Kansas farm, in learning the art of canning. This housewife's story of her ultimate success is told, in the simplest manner, in a recent issue of The Southern Ruralist, in which it appears as one of the prize winning contributions of a contest on canning.

In rather apologetic manner, this housewife tells of her troubles as a beginner, saying:

"During the past four years I have done much canning and preserving. At first I made a number of failures but perseverance finally won. I could have won out much quicker if I had known where to get absolutely reliable advice, but one told 'her system,' another told me of another method, and so on—each person had a different way. The result was I usually tried a little of each one and failed, of course. But gradually I learned for myself the principal things that led to success."

There we have the simple explanation of a triumph over difficulties. As a result of her troubles this Kansas housewife sets down a series of rules for canners, comprising what she learned from sad experience.

"1. Use only the best products for canning.
"2. Always make certain that everything is absolutely clean.
"3. Always examine cans and jars to see that they are correctly sealed.

"4. Don't wait until the last minute to make preparations."

Could anything be simpler? It seems that any person of ordinary intelligence would be able to guess these rules. Yet the Kansas housewife found them out after a long struggle and uses them as sign boards to point out the way of success to others, thereby becoming a teacher, philosopher and prize winner as well as a good canner.

In Kentucky this year the rules this housewife learned for canning may not be of as great interest as they might have been in other times, because of the severe damage done by the three succeeding frosts to the products which would have been canned. Not only to the farmer's wife or the farmer, but to all who seek to know the way to better achievement, however, should the excerpts from this housewife's tale of perseverance to success prove interesting.

It is the old, old story. "If at first you don't succeed, try, try again." It brings out strikingly because so simply, the thought uttered by the Kentucky writer and the Louisville minister, which Shakespeare expressed so tersely, "Some falls are means, the happier to arise."—Lexington Herald.

MORE FARM LABOR IN THE SOUTH.

In the South, the return of many negroes to their homes, after the exodus during the war to the North, has greatly increased the supply of negro labor. For a time the Northern industrial centers appeared as an earthly paradise to Southern negroes. But the negro laborers were the first to be affected by the slump in industry. Many have been glad to get back home in the South, and most of those who have returned have a saner view of the relative opportunities in the South and in the North.

Many of the white workers in the cities who went from the country under the lure of the big wages and easy hours realized all the time that their employment was of temporary nature, and they were prepared to seek their former occupations in the rural districts again when conditions in the cities became unfavorable.

This is an encouraging sign for agriculture. With an adequate supply of labor at reasonable wages one of the big problems of the farm is solved. With this out of the way, it will be easier to dispose of some of the others.—Houston (Tex.) Post.

KENTUCKY SUPERSTITIONS.

"Kentucky Superstitions," by Daniel L. Thomas and Lucy E. Thomas, has been recently sent to the library by Miss Thomas. It is a very valuable contribution to folk lore. Shakespearean mention of superstitions has been thoroughly treated. New England superstitions and those of the Pennsylvania Germans which has been gathered by this collection make it quite the fullest of this part of the country.

Many of the superstitions are common throughout the United States and at least one was believed and practiced in ancient India—throwing rice after a newly married couple to insure a large family.

Eating carrots will make one beautiful. Now that it is learned that few articles of food contain so many vitamins as young carrots, we wonder if the superstition may have a foundation of fact.

If you kill a cat you will have bad luck for seven years.

About a hundred wart cures are given. Most of these are general; but one apparently limited to the mountains is: To remove a wart, rub it with nine pieces of gravel, and then place the pieces in the fork of the roads. We have been told by physicians, whether correctly or not we cannot say, that any of these wart cures may be efficacious if profoundly believed, owing to the connection between warts and nerves.

The following has a widespread acceptance in the lowlands as well as the mountains: Rub seven grains of corn on the warts and then feed the corn to your neighbor's chickens. Another: Kill a black cat. Take it to a graveyard at midnight and rub the cat on the wart.

If you tell your dreams to an old hollow stump, they will come true.

The Evil Eye, so firmly believed in Italy, is believed in by people in parts of Kentucky and that the coral or jet hand with fingers clenched, will avert the disaster.

For nose bleeding hold a Bible over the sufferer's head and read Ezekiel 16:6 three times.

If you let a cedar grow in your yard large enough to shade a grave, someone in your family will die.

To cure grip hang your hat on the bedpost and drink whisky until you see two hats.—Mountain Herald.

For almost nothing—less than a cent a day—you can rent absolute security for your small articles of great value in our safe deposit vault. Can you afford to take the risk of losing them for such a small amount? We have provided, for your use, the most modern fire and burglar proof vault in this section of the country. New York. — Profit and loss vit an engagement ring! That's a perfectly possible business reckoning according to no less an authority than the Internal Revenue office of the district of New York. Among the appeal for light received there during the recent peak of income tax returns was one from a distressed young man. "During 1919," he explained "I became engaged and bought the girl a $520 diamond ring. During 1920, for some fool reason, she broke off the engagement." He went on to point out that she liked the ring, however, and that he sold it to her for $150, thereby losing a good $100; and furthermore, that it was not at all his fault that the catastrophe befell. "Now she is willing to be engaged again," he concluded, "if I will let her keep the ring and give back the $150, but I won't do it. I am through with her, but tell you this so you will know all the facts so you can tell me if I have to pay income on the $100." Fantastic as the situation may sound, the man's claim was deemed perfectly just and he was advised to deduct the $100 loss.

Not for any insignificant understanding of diplomacy has Chauncey M. Depew achieved fame. When he celebrated his 87th birthday a few days ago, the only thing upon which he was unwilling to converse expensively with the reporters was the matter of women's dress. "What do you, looking back over four score years of of women and fashions, think of the costumes today?" was the most popular question hurled at him. Everybody tried it out. Not a reported over looked it. But to them all, the urbane Chauncey smiled and shook his head. "Let's leave that to the ladies," he repeated. He is the same cheery soul that he always was. "I'm getting just as much fun out of life as I ever did," he said, "and I can assure you that the first 87 years are the best."

Along with "Carry your lunch," and "Bring your own!" New York is preparing to put into practice—if necessary—another slogan "Print your own." The printed word has come to have a tremendous part in the work of any going concern and every corporation or business of any kind and much size looks upon its printing—among it, letter heads, booklets, forms, instructions, and, which is more important, PAY ENVELOPPES—as being as essential to the successful conduct of business as steam radiators and swivel chairs. And every now and again lately have come rumors that threaten and have sometimes interfered with the smooth sailing of the office as regards these necessities; labor shortage, strikes, etc. Whether or not New York printing presses are tied up by the anticipated May 1 deadlock of the printing employers and their men over the 44-hour week the latter's demand shall become effective on that date, business men here are beginning to take a bit or that preparedness they have preached so strongly. They are concluding that whether or not New York is exempted from the strike which promises to tie up practically the rest of the county, every one within two hundred miles of New York will be sending his work there to be done. Accordingly in banks, factories, and all sorts of offices compact multi-graphs are being installed, all ready to turn out those valuable printed words, without going outside the doors and every stenographer and every office boy is preparing to become a printer.

At last we are seeing a whole flock of the "moderns" in the art world—and at last once. In fact, so many of them at once are almost dizzying to an ordinary person. A really remarkable collection of modern French masters is being shown over at the Brooklyn Museum, with the very, VERY moderns, who have caused such a storm, among them. Geanne, Gauguin, Picasso, Monet, Matisse, and others of the futurist-sublist-various - other - "ists", schools, are there in all their amazement. "Do you think those people are crazy or do you think they have a 'hunch'?" a tremendously interested, alert girl standing near me at the exhibition, asked of the man with her, who looked as though he himself were a young artist. "I think they have a 'hunch,'" he said quite slowly and thoughtfully, "but I'm darned if I can make out what it is."

The Equity Pictures Corporation has purchased the rights to "The Black Panther's Cub," a picture of unusual dramatic power and intensity, and they have selected a fit cast to produce it: Florence Reed, Norman Trevor, Tyrone Power, Philip Bartholomae, all of whom achieved their fame on the spoken stage, and Mlle. Dazile, the dancer.

The astronomers failed to get much excited over the recent eclipse of the moon. But there were plenty others who didn't overlook the opportunity—at least here in New York City. The poor policemen, with all their other present troubles, were the principal sufferers. Lieut. Jackson was at the desk in the Twenty-second street station when a hysterical woman entered. "I've got forebodings of disaster," she exclaimed, "and I demand police protection until the moon shines again. My head aches and I got it right that there's going to be trouble." The lieutenant thought he was humoring a stray crank and assured her that he would detail a detective to keep a particular watch on the moon and prevent any monkey business. But that woman was followed by another and another; until by 2 a. m. a dozen men and women had come to the station with the same demand. The police didn't learn who started the story but it doesn't take much to start a stampede in some parts of this city.

UNCLE TED'S BED-TIME STORIES.

How the Railroad Labor Board Is Helping to End Railroad Troubles.

"But there hasn't been a railroad strike for a long time now, 'cause I was talking to Mr. Jones and you know he is an engineer on one of the fastest trains and ought to know something about what he says!" Jack was having quite a time making sister Ruth understand that, being older than she, he felt that his argument should be the final word.

"Well, I don't care," continued Ruth. "I don't see why there is to stop the railroad men from going on strike just as they used to."

"Here, hero, what's all the excitement?" called Uncle Ted from the back porch where he was planting flowers in a row of window boxes. "I thought you kiddies had gone out to play tag, and here you are fussing again."

"We aren't fussing," said Jack. "Ruth says the railroad men can strike whenever they want to and I say they can't."

"And neither one of you knows what you are talking about," interrupted Uncle Ted. "You are both right and you are both wrong. Look here, I'm about through. Suppose you run out to the awing and I'll be along just as soon as I wash my hands. Then if you are REAL good I'll tell you something about our railroads."

"Gee! Uncle Ted," commented Jack. "You're a good scout."

It wasn't long before the three chums were sitting in the lawn swing and Uncle Ted had started his story. "I'm going to explain a little about what is known as the Railroad Labor Board that came into being through the transportation act of which I have told you before. This board is made up of nine men. Three of these men represent the public—that is, you and your father and Johnny's father—when disputes come up, so that strikes can be stopped and our food and clothes can continue to be shipped. These three are appointed by the President. Then there are three representing the railroads. They are picked from a list of six given the President by the Railroad Executives' Association. The last three represent the railroad men, as you call them, that is, railroad labor. These three are appointed by the President from a list of ten given him by the railroad labor organizations."

"But what do they do?" asked Ruth. "Now, Miss Impatience, wait a minute. This board has no power to enforce any decisions it may make, but public opinion is relied upon to make them effective. Ruth, you see when the employees of the railroads are not satisfied with their pay they can complain of this board. The board then

WORK THAT TELLS

Plenty of It Has Been Done Right Here in Maysville.

To thoroughly know the virtues of a medicine you must investigate its work. Doan's Kidney Pills stand this test, and plenty of proof exists right here in Maysville. People who testified years ago to relief from backache, kidney and urinary disorders, now give confirmed testimony—declare the results have lasted. How can any Maysville sufferer longer doubt the evidence?

Mrs. W. A. Schatzmann, 605 East Second street, Maysville, gave the following statement November 15, 1916: "From the benefit I have derived from the use of Doan's Kidney Pills I have every reason to recommend them to anyone. Whenever my kidneys have been irregular in action or I have suffered with a weakness or lameness through the small of my back I have used a box or so of Doan's and they have always proven sufficient to cure the complaint quickly."

On November 22, 1920, Mrs. Schatzmann said: "Doan's Kidney Pills certainly do all that is claimed for them. I recommend them again as I did before when I publicly endorsed them in 1916. Doan's have made a lasting cure for me."

has the power to hear the complaint and make a decision as to what shall be done. It can also hear complaints regarding working conditions. The employers, the railroads themselves, can also complain to this board if they don't like what the employees do. If neither the employers nor the employees have a complaint the board may feel that the public has, and it has the power to start a hearing itself for the public.

"There is another good thing about this board. If the railroad employees and the railroad managements get into a dispute it is the duty of the board to watch this dispute closely. If the time comes when the board thinks this dispute may mean the stopping of railroad traffic and bringing danger to the public it can call a conference to settle the matter."

"What has it done so far?" asked Jack.

"The board, Jack, recently handed down a decision doing away with the national agreements and putting in their place a set of sixteen principles. The two important ones were that labor should give eight hours' work for eight hours' pay and also that the employers should deal with men representing their employees no matter whether or not they were employed upon the road on which the dispute occurred. This would make it possible for all the engineers to select one man to deal with all the railroad managements of the country on matters affecting engineers."

"The board has selected as its chairman, Judge R. M. Barton, of Tennessee, who was formerly a member of the Court of Appeals of Tennessee. Henry Hunt, former Mayor of Cincinnati, who recently retired from the board after serving his one year term, has been succeeded by Benjamin W. Hooper, former Republican Governor of Tennessee. Walter L. McMenimen, deputy president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, has been appointed to take the place of J. J. Forrester, representing labor. Samuel Higgins, formerly general manager of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, takes the place of W. L. Park, representing management, who retired April 15th."

"So you see, kiddies, there is a body of men to try to settle these matters so that we won't have more strikes and I feel that it is a big step in the right direction."

UTILIZING WASTE

TOMATO SEED
Method Developed For Making Oil and Pressed Cake From Formerly Useless Product.

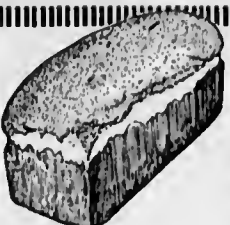

Tons of seeds which accumulate annually at tomato canning factories, and which have been regarded as waste, can now be utilized in making table oil and pressed cake for stock feed, as the result of work of chemists of the United States Department of Agriculture. It is estimated that approximately 2,000 tons of seed is available annually as the output of the pulping plants in Eastern and Middle Western tomato belts. There seed, the department specialists say, contain from 15 to 20 per cent. of oil. The profitable utilization of tomato seed and the methods of making it into oil and cake are described in Department Bulletin 927, "Commercial Utilization of Waste Seed from the Tomato Pulp Industry," just published by the department.

The waste mass of seeds and skins as it comes from the pulping operations is known as "cyclone waste." To separate the seeds from this waste, the specialists say, the most practical method is to make the separation in the original cycloning operation used in making the pulp. A machine called a double cyclone is now being manufactured which separates the seeds from the skins and cores in one operation.

The seed, when it is separated from other material, contains from 65 to 70 per cent water, a large amount of which should be removed before the seeds are made into oil. This can be done by pressure, by centrifugal force, or by drying. The latter method, the specialists say, is the most successful and economic one.

The expeller type of press, which is used commonly for a number of purposes, is best suited for extracting oil from tomato seed. A yield of about 17 per cent. of oil can be expected from this type of press when it is properly adjusted. The tomato seed oil obtained by the expeller process has a deep, brown color and a strong odor. It was learned that refining and deodorizing are necessary.

meal shows that it compares favorably with several of the best known meals now used for stock feed. It contains 37 per cent. protein, 29.1 per cent. nitrogen-free extract, and 22 per cent. fiber. From the estimates made on the cost of separating, assembling, drying, and crushing seed, with the cost of the necessary equipment, considerable profit is indicated from an undertaking based on the utilization of this waste, the specialists say. They suggest that the most feasible and economical method of procedure is to separate and dry the seed at the various pulping stations, and to ship it to the utilization center where the commercial products can be manufactured.

Behind that Electric Light there's Life!

FOLLOW back along the little rubber-covered wires, out of your house, over the poles or through the underground "mains" and you will find a whirling, singing power house—peopled with near-human machines and very human men.

Here men feed the fires beneath the blistering boilers; here men start, stop and care for the roaring turbines and purring generators while other men keep ever-watchful eyes on instruments and switchboards; in short, here in this little-known little-visited Power House, men are supplying the train and brawn which helps to assure you of continuous Electric Service.

Visit your Power House in reality, some day. It will be an hour or two well spent and you'll take away, we believe, a better appreciation of the human side of a great industry—your Central Station.

some instances the goals set were not reached, and in other schools the attendance was not quite up to last year, still the good results from the campaign are equal to if not greater than any yet made. This is especially noticeable throughout the county. Many struggling schools through the interest in the campaign have been stirred with enthusiasm for the work and are determined to push on for better permanent results. Fine programs were carried on in all schools and the enthusiasm was great. It has done the populace good to get stirred with the Sunday school spirit again. Now for the work of conservation. How many have seen how good it is to attend school? Next Sunday will be a good time to go again. It will be Mother's Day and of all days this is one that all should attend Sunday school and church. Schools should prepare for the day with care and strive to make it as interesting and helpful as Sunday.

To the Christian school goes the credit for having the largest Sunday school ever assembled in Maysville. It took two churches to hold them. And it takes the whole town to hold the proud superintendent John F. Fanner who has spent nervous energy by the ton to bring about the result. The fine showing made by this school shows what real hustle can accomplish.

The Lewisburg Baptist holds the head of the county column, 296 is sure some Sunday school for a small town. The live pastor, Rev. Griffin, is greatly rejoiced over the results.

Tho Sardis M. E. school just measured up to their goal—200. Fine for them! Their youngest member present was six months old and the oldest 81. Who can beat it?

The officers of the association are rejoiced over the success of the campaign. The increased interest in the county schools is encouraging. The next move will be the district conventions which will lead up to the county convention. The officers feel that the interest now taken in the work we are due for a rousing county convention.

The Two Lick Baptist church, just over the line in Bracken county, wants the Mason county people to know that it is alive, reporting an attendance of 223 for "Go-To-Sunday-School-Day." This thriving little church is close enough to Mason county to contract the Sunday school spirit so prevalent here.

The people of Cincinnati contributed approximately $35,000 to "Billy" Sunday in Sunday's offerings at the big tabernacle.

The American public supports 16,500 motion picture theaters, making 5,000,000 visits to them a year, and spends $750,000,000 annually for this amusement.
